Sasso Guerrero & Henderlite Introduces Criminal Defense Services Division for Florida Residents

August 17, 2026

JACKSONVILLE, FL - August 17, 2026 -
Sasso Guerrero & Henderlite has introduced a dedicated Criminal Defense Division to serve individuals facing criminal charges throughout Northeast Florida. The Jacksonville-based law firm, known primarily for its family law practice led by three Board Certified Marital & Family Law Experts, is expanding public awareness of its criminal defense services as a resource for those navigating the criminal justice system.

Criminal matters can vary considerably in both severity and circumstance. A charge may range from a minor traffic offense to a serious felony, and each carries its own set of potential consequences, procedural requirements, and available defenses. Understanding the nature of the charges, the possible penalties, and the steps involved in the court process can help individuals make informed decisions about how to proceed.

The firm's Criminal Defense Division handles a broad range of matters, including domestic violence, driving under the influence, drug crimes, felony charges, gun charges, misdemeanor charges, property crimes, and traffic offenses. Each of these areas involves distinct factual circumstances, procedural considerations, and legal questions. The firm intends to address these individual practice areas in greater depth through future communications.

A central principle of the division's approach is the individual evaluation of each case. Factors that may influence a criminal matter include the circumstances surrounding an arrest, the evidence collected by law enforcement, witness information, statements made by the accused, and search or seizure questions where applicable. The specific elements of an alleged offense also play a significant role in how a case may unfold. Because these variables differ from one matter to the next, no single defense strategy or outcome applies universally.

A criminal defense attorney serves several functions throughout a case. This work includes helping a client understand the charges and the criminal court process, reviewing the facts and available evidence, identifying legal issues, discussing available options, and representing the client's interests as the matter proceeds.

"Every criminal case begins with a specific set of facts, and those facts shape the questions that follow," said Jay Henderlite, Managing Partner at Sasso Guerrero & Henderlite. "The role of a defense attorney is to examine those details closely, explain what they mean, and help a client understand the process ahead."

Henderlite added that access to information is often as important as representation itself. "Individuals who understand the charges against them and the steps of the court process are better positioned to make informed decisions," he said. "The purpose of the Criminal Defense Division is to provide that clarity alongside representation for people across Northeast Florida."

The firm's criminal defense services are available to individuals throughout the Northeast Florida region. While the practice is based in Jacksonville, the division works with clients facing charges across the surrounding communities.
