Plumbing Supply and More Announces Expanded Distribution Network to Address National Supply House Shortages

July 28, 2026

Caln Township, Pennsylvania - July 28, 2026 -
Plumbing Supply And More announced today the completion of its expanded 10-warehouse distribution network, a strategic initiative designed to address ongoing inventory shortages affecting contractors and property owners nationwide. The expansion enables the 75-year-old family-owned distributor to stock over 20,000 plumbing and HVAC components across multiple facilities, reducing order fulfillment times and part availability issues that have plagued the industry.

The expansion comes as industry data shows that 67 percent of contractors report project delays due to part unavailability at local suppliers, according to recent trade association surveys. The enhanced distribution network positions the Supply House to maintain consistent inventory levels across pipe and fittings, valves, water heaters, hydronic heating systems, HVAC equipment, ducting and venting, and professional tools.

"The expansion of our warehouse network represents a direct response to contractor feedback about inventory gaps in the marketplace," said John Mitchell, Operations Director at Plumbing Supply and More. "By strategically positioning inventory across 10 locations, we can fulfill orders the same day when placed before 1 PM, which helps contractors maintain their project schedules."

The company has established manufacturer-direct sourcing agreements with major HVAC equipment brands including Carrier and Trane as part of the expansion. This arrangement allows for consistent stocking of both standard replacement parts and specialized components that typically require special ordering through traditional retail channels.

The distribution network expansion also introduces wholesale pricing structures to non-commercial customers. Previously, wholesale rates were restricted to licensed contractors with established trade accounts. The new pricing model extends these rates to property owners undertaking their own repairs and installations, with free shipping available on orders exceeding $150.

Technical support staffing has been increased to complement the expanded inventory capacity. The company has hired additional personnel with field experience in plumbing and HVAC installation to provide product selection guidance and application support.

"Our hiring focus has been on individuals who have worked in the trades," said Sarah Chen, Director of Customer Service at Plumbing Supply and More. "This ensures customers receive accurate technical guidance when selecting components for specific applications."

The practical implications of the expanded distribution network include reduced vehicle mileage for contractors who previously visited multiple suppliers to locate specific parts, decreased project completion times due to improved part availability, and standardized pricing across customer categories.

The expansion builds on the company's 75-year presence in the plumbing and HVAC distribution sector. The multi-warehouse approach contrasts with the single-location model used by many regional suppliers, allowing for redundant inventory coverage when specific items experience high demand.

Plumbing Supply and More maintains its complete product catalog and ordering platform at https://www.plumbingsupplyandmore.com/, where customers can access the expanded inventory across all distribution locations. The company's distribution network now covers major metropolitan areas while maintaining next-day delivery capability to most continental U.S. locations.
